2019 RMGCSA Assistant's Outing
 Consulting as a Superintendent

As customer, employee, and vendor expectations rise, the role of the superintendent becomes increasingly complex. Conflicting priorities amongst these stakeholders can leave many leaders feeling overwhelmed and unclear about how to effectively impact these critical relationships while managing the day to day demands of the golf course.

In this interactive workshop, participants will learn:

- Foundational consulting strategies to solve problems and build relationships
- How powerful questions can mitigate conflict
- Practical advising techniques designed to increase credibility and confidence

Speaker Bio - Danielle McCormick

As a leader of K-Coe Isom's People Solutions team, Danielle role is to give employees and leaders across the USA a lift from where they are professionally to where they want to go. Most often, her coaching is within organizations that include service companies, manufacturing plants, and farm businesses. Danielle and her team provide that "lift," ultimately delivering the crucial "culture" angle of HR and business leadership effectiveness. Using a proven approach developed internally at K-Coe Isom, she and her team hit all the right notes identifying and solving underperforming leadership issues, morale and turnover problems, lack of clarity in direction and goals, and constructive feedback needs. Managing these elements of the employer/employee puzzle leads to huge peace of mind and opens the door to explore exciting new ways to encourage and develop talent.

To aid companies in taking that even more valuable step, Danielle leads company-wide initiatives and individual development programs that incorporate talent advisor sessions, leadership and executive coaching, and succession planning for businesses of all sizes. She brings more than eighteen years of experience in leadership training, culture development, and human resources consulting to her role, which she combines with an infectious passion for developing emerging leaders. Business owners and managers regularly see the impact of her counsel on their employee morale and performance as well as their customer satisfaction.
